

The Necessities for Building a Thesis Statement

仮説を立てるための前提

The thesis statement is the main claim of one's research paper. As such, knowing how to create one is of utmost importance. However, constructing one from scratch can be most challenging for a new researcher. In this workshop, our goal is to help alleviate this problem by focusing on the necessary elements for constructing a thesis statement and the consequences if one of these elements is missing or mistaken for the thesis statement itself. In other words, what does one need for building a thesis statement and why is it necessary.
